

FEDERAL JUDGE IMPEACHED

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE most solemn sight in all the proceedings of a self-governing people is the impeachment trial of a high federal official. In the United States the House of Representatives impeaches (accuses) him; and the Senate tries the case. Thus, some time back, the House of Representatives impeached Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of Florida, and today the Senate convicted him by the necessary two-thirds vote.

DIPPED IN POLITICS

G. H. Gannon Charged Campaign Levy Against His Staff

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Saying "we won't stand for political skulduggery in WPA," Harry L. Hopkins Thursday dismissed George H. Gannon, Washington state administrator, for collecting campaign contributions from his staff.

He announced that he was "looking into" complaints that WPA workers in Pennsylvania were used to mail circulars attacking Stephen Raushenbush, president of the Pennsylvania Security League.

At a conference, Hopkins said that he had telegraphed Gannon that he was "relieving" him as state administrator "as a result of conclusive evidence secured in the investigation of political activity and collection of funds in your administration for political purposes."

Hopkins said he did not know whether Gannon had permitted the collection of between $5,000 and $4,000 from administrative employees. He said that "Gannon was running that show and I hold him responsible for what was done."

Hopkins said he did not know what the money was collected for, but that it had been returned as a result of his investigation. Gannon is a Democrat, he said. "I don't remember how he got his job," he added.

Hopkins was critical of the suggestion recently made by Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) that the administration of relief be turned back to the states. He said that such a step would mean "increased political influences."

"I reported progress in cutting down the number of relief workers to 3,400,000 a July 1. He said that the total declined from 3,858,000 March 7 to 3,636,000 April 4. WPA employment on those dates was 3,631,000 and 2,733,000, respectively, and had dropped to 2,689,000 a week later.

Although enrollment in the Civilian Conservation Corps declined, he said that employment by other agencies, chiefly the Bureau of Public Roads and PWA, rose from 371,000 to 467,000. July 1 Hopkins said he expected WPA to have 2,300,000 or 2,400,000 out of the 3,400,000.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Americans have respect for their federal judges—and rightly so. Judge Ritter is only the ninth federal jurist to be impeached, and only the fourth to be convicted, in the whole history of our republic.

Few nations can show so good a record for 160 years. And yet, the very nature of a federal judge's office is such that the people and their representatives must always be vigilant.

A federal judge is appointed for life. He cannot be "reached" by any of the political practices customary in a republic—but on the other hand his aloofness makes for arbitrary power that in weak hands leads to abuse.

Such was the case with Judge Ritter, who allowed his former law partner a fee of $75,000 in a Florida hotel receivership case so he himself might be paid on an old partnership debt. But things like this have been proved only four times in the history of our nation.

No other department of government, federal, state or local, can compare with the record of the federal judges.

Bible Teaching in Schools Opposed

Lutherans Criticize It as "Beginning of State Church"

STUTTGART, Ark.—(AP)—Charging compulsory religious instruction in the schools was the "actual beginning of a state church in America," the Arkansas-West Tennessee conference of the Lutheran church adopted a resolution Friday opposing the practice including daily Bible reading.

"It was urged that the system be abandoned in favor of weekly periods conducted under church supervision with attendance voluntary."

"Social Security" to Increase Prices

Max Walker Outlines Federal Proposal Before Hope Rotarians

A nation of payroll taxes and rising prices on manufactured commodities, was visualized in an address on the federal government's social security program Friday by Max Walker, before Hope Rotary club in Hotel Barlow.

Mr. Walker, local accountant, made a detailed study of the operation of the government's program to finance a nation-wide system of old-age pensions and unemployment benefits.

Since the tax will be divided equally between employees and employing companies, based on total labor costs, Mr. Walker concluded there would be a general rise in the price of all manufactured articles this year and next. The tax is accruing this year, but is not due to the federal treasury until next year.

No court test of the constitutionality of the law can be obtained until the first payment is due next year, Mr. Walker pointed out.

A Rotary guest Friday was Andrew (Speedy) Hutson.

Attorney General Bailey Successful in Extradition Move

ATTORNEY ASLEEP

State Government "Jumps Gun" to Give New York the Prisoner

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Loudly protesting that he was "being kidnapped," Charles (Lucky) Luciano, reputed New York vice king, was spirited out of Little Rock Friday by New York detectives.

Luciano was released by local authorities five minutes after the expiration of a federal court order delaying his extradition 10 days. He faces four charges of compulsory prostitution in New York.

Luciano's attorneys, unaware of the development, planned a new federal court move here Friday.

Luciano Turned Over
LITTLE ROCK.—Catching flat-footed the high-priced staff of lawyers hired by Charles Luciano, Attorney General Carl E. Bailey and Prosecuting Attorney Fred Donham turned the accused king of New York racketeers over to New York detectives at 12:01 Friday morning.

Custody of the prisoner was transferred at the county jail. Sheriff Branch made the formal transfer but he did so on authority of Mr. Bailey and Mr. Donham both of whom were at the jail.

Several State Rangers aided the New York officers in guarding Luciano as he left.

Luciano was hustled out of the city at once. Mr. Bailey, Mr. Donham and Sheriff Branch joined in asking the press not to mention the means of transportation used or the route to be followed. They called attention to the fact that there have been repeated reports that Luciano's "grovers" would attempt to liberate him.

Luciano loudly protested that he was being deprived of his "legal rights." He also charged that he was being kidnapped.

Finally just before he departed, he seemed to regain his composure for a moment for he thanked Sheriff Branch for the courteous treatment that he had received while in the officer's custody.

As soon as Luciano had left the jail, Mr. Bailey called Thomas E. Dewey in New York on long-distance telephone and notified him of what had been done. Mr. Dewey was employed at the news and warmly congratulated both the attorney general and Mr. Donham. Dewey is a special assistant district attorney appointed by Governor Lehman of New York in an effort to rid New York of the rackets that infest the great city.

Police Are to Investigate Negro Resort on Third Street

Complaints against a negro dance hall on Third street, near the Robins liquor store, have reached city officials, Mayor Albert Graves said Friday.

Mayor Graves pointed out that the city council some time ago passed an ordinance prohibiting disorderly houses—where liquor is permitted or encouraged.

Mayor Graves said that charges against the negro dance hall would be investigated and that the matter would come up for discussion before the city council at its next meeting Tuesday night.

Mother of Five Is Hanged by British

Convicted Poisoner of Invalid Executed Despite Protests

BIRMINGHAM, Eng.—(AP)—Mrs. Dorothy Waddingham, 34, mother of five children, was hanged at Winslow Green prison Thursday. A last overnight appeal to the Home Office having been rejected, the nurse was led to the gallows and the trap was sprung shortly after 9 a. m. She was the ninth woman to be executed in Great Britain since the start of the century.

The state charged that Mrs. Waddingham poisoned her bedridden patient to obtain the £1,600 (about $3,000) legacy which Mrs. Baguley had willed to her nurse.

Mrs. Waddingham and Ronald J. Sullivan, co-operator with her of the Nottingham Nursing Home, were arrested January 30, charged with putting Mrs. Baguley and her daughter, 50-year-old Miss Ada Louise Baguley, to death slowly with drugs.

Sullivan, against whom the crown presented no evidence, was acquitted of the slaying of Mrs. Baguley, but Mrs. Waddingham was convicted of murder of Miss Baguley.

A crowd of 2,000 persons stood in nearby streets, watching a demonstration against capital punishment, while Mrs. Waddingham was hanged.

Mrs. Violet Van der Elst, wealthy London woman who had led anti-death penalty demonstrations during at least three previous hangings, led the demonstration.

Riding in a limousine equipped with a loud speaker, Mrs. Van der Elst attempted to drive through the gates to the prison, but was turned back by police.

Her automobile bore a large sign reading: "Men and women, I appeal to you to prevent the hanging of a mother. This barbaric age would hang the mother of five children."

Men walked through the streets bearing placards. "Stop this terrible crime of hanging of a mother of five children."

Police blocked off the streets leading to the prison, and 100 reserves were held in readiness at a nearby theater.

Ritter, of Florida Bench, Is Convicted of "Splitting" Fee

Senate Finds He Brought His Court "Into Scandal, Disrepute"

TWO-THIRDS VOTE

Is 9th Judge Tried, 4th to Be Convicted, in All U. S. History

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of Florida, was convicted Friday by the senate on a two-thirds impeachment charge that he brought his court "into scandal and disrepute."

The conviction came on the seventh ballot, when the vote was 56 to 28, exactly the required two-thirds.

Ritter was acquitted on six previous charges by close votes.

"Split" Receiver's Fee
The white-haired, sallow-complexioned Florida jurist, elevated to the federal bench by President Coolidge, was the twelfth person in the nation's history to face a senate court of impeachment.

A president, a senator, a secretary of war and eight federal judges have preceded him.

A President Was Tried
The most celebrated impeachment trial was that of President Andrew Johnson, accused of usurpation of the law in violating the tenure of office act. Only one vote of the requisite two-thirds saved Johnson from conviction and removal from office.

William Blount, a senator from Tennessee, was the first impeachment defendant. Accused of sedition, the charges were dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Only one justice of the supreme court has even faced ouster. Chief Justice Samuel Chase, accused of misconduct at trials, who finally was acquitted.

The secretary of war to be impeached was William K. Belknap, charged with bribery. He was acquitted, however, after he had resigned from the cabinet in 1876.

Three Judges Acquitted
Of the eight federal judges ordered before the bar of the senate, four were acquitted. Three found guilty and removed from office, and one resigned before a verdict could be rendered.

The house of representatives inaugurates impeachment proceedings. Any member of that body has the privilege of preferring charges against a federal official. The house judiciary committee receives the charges unless they are tabled immediately.

The judiciary committee studies the evidence and recommends the action to be followed by the house.

In the case of Judge Ritter, charged with accepting $45,000 from a former law partner who had been allowed a $75,000 fee in receivership, the house voted 181 to 146 to try him before the senate.

The Procedure
Judge Ritter was prosecuted by three managers from the house headed by Representative Sumners of Texas, chairman of the judiciary committee and a participant in two previous impeachment trials. The defendant was allowed counsel and testified himself.

The defendant will be removed from office and disqualified "to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States."

Judgment in impeachment cases may not extend further than the individual person convicted "shall not be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment, according to the law."

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene,
the Health Magazine

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of daily columns by Dr. Fishbein, covering every phase of the most important subject in every home, the care and feeding of children during the first two years of their lives. Mothers are urged to clip these columns
and save them in a scrapbook form, to make an invaluable book on the subject of baby's health.

In previous generations, the woman who was about to bear a child kept the matter a secret from even her husband until well along in the course of the event. As the time approached when the child was to be born, she would notify her doctor.

In many instances, however, the doctor was not notified until the moment of childbirth. Then, in the home,
with the aid of a neighbor or a relative,
the child would be brought into the community.

Advances of scientific medicine have changed our points of view in relation to the child. The intelligent woman will consult her doctor long before she is ready to have a child.

He finds out whether her health will permit her to have a child without seriously injuring herself and without danger to the prospective baby.

The intelligent woman also consults her doctor just as soon she realizes that she is going to have a baby. He examines her to make certain of the diagnosis. He confirms his examination by various tests made in the laboratory, as well as by physical examination of the patient herself.

The doctor will do many things to regulate the expectant mother's habits and hygiene, according to her condition. He will control her diet, her exercise, her rest, her work, and every other factor of her existence, in relation to the physical changes which she will undergo during this period.
He will make certain that everyone of the organs is functioning satisfactorily.
Such care previous to childbirth,
known as prenatal care, is of utmost importance in lowering the amount of sickness and death associated with bringing healthy children into the world. It serves to relieve the prospective mother of much anxiety and helps to keep the well woman well.

The doctor finds complications the moment they develop, and prevents their becoming worse. He studies the condition of the coming child and regulates the life of the mother so as to make the child, at the time of its birth,
as capable as possible of undergoing the vicissitudes of the first year of life. The first year of life, like the last, is a most dangerous one.

Regardless of the vast expenditures in educating women concerning the importance of prenatal care, there are still tremendous numbers who do not realize its necessity and fail to understand what proper prenatal care includes.

These people do not recognize the danger of persistent vomiting, bleeding, nausea, and even difficulty with their vision, although every one of these symptoms is a warning that great danger is near.

Approximately 20,000 women lose their lives in the United States every year as the direct or indirect result of childbirth. Many of these deaths are preventable.

Much of the blame attaches to the women themselves. Because of ignorance and negligence, thousands of them fail to take advantage of what modern medicine can do to prevent complications and insure the birth of a healthy child.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

It is one of the ironies of American history that, although we have engined Thomas Jefferson as one of our greatest heroes, and have built most of our liberal thinking around his ideals, we have steadfastly refused to do any of the things he advised us to do. Instead, we have followed his bitterest antagonist, Alexander Hamilton.

James Truslow Adams lights up this paradox in a thoughtful biography,
"The Living Jefferson" (Scribner's, $3), in which he brings the Jeffersonian philosophy down to date and speculates on the chances for our making a belated return to its principles.

Jefferson, he says, was not the unadulterated left-wing Democrat we sometimes suppose. He felt that democracy would work only under cer-

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

"So the little girl lighted a candle to guide her to the house where dreams come true." Mrs. Adams read from the new storybook, the bright green and gold cover. "It was a red candle."

Betty waited until her mother paused for breath, then she handed her an old, much worn, beloved brown book. "Please read me the one about the beanstalk."

"But Betty dear, I've read and reread that. You know every word of
it. This is a brand-new story."

"But I like the beanstalk one best.
How did Jack get away? Read what happened to him."

Mrs. Adams read the tale again and a beautiful light replaced the boredom
in Betty's blue eyes.

Another Familiar Request
"Now read the Three Bears," she said when her mother finished.

"Honey, you know that story by heart!"

"Read it!" the child insisted. "Tell me about the chairs and three beds
and three bowls."

The new story-book lay unopened for a long time. Finally when Betty entered school and began to learn to make words out of letters she picked it up. She wasn't interested in the story. It was much more fun to make the beanstalk and the three bears come to life under her eyes.

She liked forming words, though, and pretty soon the old favorites weren't hard enough.

Parents sometimes worry because of the tendency with which a child clings to a well-loved story. They are afraid that the child has a phlegmatic mind
which does not feel the urge of exploration and adventure.

Understand Old Stories
There is no need for a father or mother to disturb himself. Every child has a few favorite stories for which he will ask, over and over again. No new tale will ever take their place. Even the change of one word will be noted by the child and he will resent it. The omission of a paragraph of description will bring an instant dissent.

"But you didn't say how Goldilocks looked!"

Children seem to love their stories better as they grow thread bare.
Maybe it is because their juvenile minds cannot grasp them until there has been much repetition. Maybe it is because they are so much more at home in familiar fields.

It is the child who has no favorites
for which he pleads, about whom a little worrying might not come amiss.
Favorite books and pictures are comfortable Gibraltar on which to estab-

Gorgeous

BY LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

© 1938 NEA Syndicate, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

graphic model, posing for photographs to be used in advertisements. Unknown at first, she is soon in high demand in the studios, particularly after she is chosen as "The Hillyer Soap Girl."

Toby shares an apartment with HARRIET HOLM, another model,
engaged to marry CLYDE SABIN, whom Toby distrusts.

Wealthy TIM JAMIESON shows
Toby with attention for a time and then seems to forget
her. Toby's oldest friend is BILL DIANDE, advertising salesman.
She is fond of Bill but has never thought of him romantically.

JAY HILLIER, president of the Hillyer Soap Company, sees Toby posing for some photographs. He takes her to dinner and later she has frequent engagements with him.

Clyde Sabin marries a wealthy widow, and Harriet, heart-broken, attempts suicide. She recovers and later goes to the country for a rest.

Toby sees Tim Jamieson again
and one day goes on a picnic with him. He asks, jealously, "How much does Jay Hillyer mean to you?"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXIII

TOBY said evenly, "He means a lot, Tim. He's been a real friend."

"Is he in love with you? No, I don't need to ask that. Of course he is."

"But he's not!" Toby insisted warmly. "It's not like that at all, Tim. We're just friends."

"Len Logan doesn't seem to think so." (Len Logan was the newspaper columnist who had written the slyly hinting paragraphs about Hillyer and a "beautiful model.")

"Who do you think knows most about it—Len Logan or me?"

"Well, I suppose you do. But I'll tell you one thing, Gorgeous.
No man is ever 'just friends' with a girl as pretty as you are. Some of them may kid themselves that they are, but they're not. We'll let that pass, though. What I really want to know is, are you in love with him?"

She reached for a spear of grass, snapped the stem. "Are you," she asked, without looking up, "in love with Carol Marsh?"

"With Carol? Lord, no! What ever put that idea into your head?"

"Oh, I don't know. You used to like her, didn't you?"

"Well, yes, I liked her, all right.
I've gone around with her some,
but I'm not in love with her and never have been. Look, Toby, are you really on the level about what you said about Hillyer? So far as you're concerned, are you 'just friends'?"

"Of course."

"Hm. Well, that's a load off my mind."

SHE knotted the grass, slipped the circle over her arm as a bracelet, and studied the effect. She said, after a moment, "Well, it was your fault, wasn't it?"

"I suppose so. But you're not going to hold that against me forever, are you? You've made me pay for it a hundred times. Look here, Gorgeous—can't we start all over again?"

She tossed the grass bracelet aside, and got to her feet. Instead of answering, she said, "It's time we were going back. Tim. Look at the sun. It will be late by the time we get there."

"Let's not go back. Let's drive on and have dinner at one of those places farther out—"

But she made excuses, said she had to be back in town. Reluctantly, Tim arose. "All right," he said, "we'll go back. I noticed that you didn't answer my question a moment ago. You don't need to answer it. I'm giving you warning right now, though, that you aren't going to be able to keep me from seeing you. Not a chance in the world!"

Toby was ahead, walking toward the car. Apparently she had not heard. She said, stepping into the car and settling against the seat,
"It's been a grand day, Tim. And a grand picnic. Really."

"We'll have more of them. We'll have better days than this."

He headed the car back toward the city. The heat rose to meet them and the evening traffic had begun, slowing their progress. It was late when they finally reached the apartment.

Tim left, promising to call next day. The call came while Toby was eating breakfast. "We're lunching together," he announced. "Where do you want me to pick you up?"

"I'm sorry, but I'm afraid I can't make it," she told him. "I've an 11 o'clock assignment at Duryea's."

"Then how about dinner?"

"Not tonight, Tim."

"Tomorrow?"

"I'll have to tell you about that later."

BUT she could not go on refusing indefinitely. The next evening
she agreed to have dinner with him and they dined at a restaurant with tables set out on the sidewalk beneath fairy striped awnings.

The heat had diminished, but it was still too warm for comfort.
Tim said, "You shouldn't be in town in weather like this. You should be out on the coast or up in the mountains."

"I've got a job," she reminded him. "I've got to stay here and work at it. You could go away, though. Why are you staying?"

He smiled. "Trying to get rid of me?"

"No."

I am. At least, just now, I am."

Later they drove through the park and along a wide thoroughfare, heading north. Neither of them spoke often; both felt the spell of the moonless night. Headlights of oncoming cars and street lights made patterns in the darkness. The sky was a blue-black arc, dusted with star light.

An hour of this and they turned back. At the door of the apartment, Toby made the farewells brief. She hadn't felt too sure of herself out on that open road; she wasn't too sure of herself now.

Jay Hillyer telephoned next day.
His trip, he said, had taken longer than he had expected it would. He had returned only the night before.
"I hope I can see you tonight,"
he told Toby. "I've a particular reason—"

She said she would be glad to see him. It was what she needed
so much of Tim Jamieson's company, Toby told herself. She had been seeing too much of Tim lately. Far too much.

HILLYER was to call for her at 8. Toby, as she dressed, thought how angry Tim would be if he knew she was going out with Hillyer. Not that it was any affair of Tim's. He was mistaken in what he had said about Hillyer, though she couldn't convince him of it.

Besides, there was no reason for Tim to know where she was going.
She was mildly curious about the "particular reason" Hillyer wanted to see her. It was probably, she decided, something about the advertisement she had posed for.
Maybe they were going to ask her
to do another series.

Hillyer was prompt, as he always was, and Toby did not keep him waiting. She said, as she came down the steps to meet him, "Your trip must have been a success! I think it's been good for you."

"Yes, it was a good trip," he told her. "Very satisfactory. But the best part, as usual, was getting home. I hear the weather's been hot here. You don't appear to be blighted by it."

She smiled. His compliments were never like Tim's. They never embarrassed her.

"Any place in particular you want to go?" he asked as they stepped out on the street.

"No."

"They decided on a dining room high up in the sky—one that was cool, and where excellent food was served, but was not likely to be thronged. They were right about that; they had a corner to themselves."

Toby asked questions about the trip, but Hillyer waved them aside.
"First tell me what you've been doing," he said.

She did, briefly, omitting mention of Tim Jamieson. Hillyer nodded, and seemed satisfied. Then Toby remembered what he had said
in the morning.

"But you haven't told me," she said. "What the particular reason is why you wanted to see me tonight?"

"No."

"Aren't you going to tell me?
I'm beginning to be curious."

Hillyer nodded. "Yes," he said.
"I'm going to tell you. It's quite a story, Toby. I don't seem to know how to begin."

There is much these days to be thankful for. To appreciate what God has given; So let us be grateful for all we've received. From God's great bountiful Heaven. The rent that we owe to our Father above. Is "praise" from the depths of our hearts; Then let us begin to settle our debt. To-day is a good day to start. We grumble to the Father over mere trifling things. But are silent for blessings untold; Beggared, be thankful for bitter and sweet. Accept what the day unfolds. —From an old scrap book.

Young Edward is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Lester of this city, and Hope has good reason to be proud of such a youth, his reception at Nashville was most pleasing. Dr. Matt Ellis of Arkadelphia, responded with a splendid address on "The Sale of American Youth" stressing the fact that it is not so much talk that does the work, but what we teach by example. Congratulations to Mrs. E. A. Morsani, president of the City P. T. A. Council, who easily won the prize offered for the council president, who presented her unit president in the most pleasing and clever manner at the luncheon at the Garner Hotel. Mrs. Morsani, gave her introductions in lyric form, using the Italian language, receiving prolonged applause for her unique method of making the presentations.

Pancho Loses in Thrilling Match

Largest Wrestling Crowd of Season Sees Gill LaCrosse Win

More than 300 fans, the largest crowd of the spring "russling" season, were gathered in the first round of the Gill LaCrosse-Pancho Villa feature bout at Fair Park arena Thursday night.
It lasted only 58 seconds and was the most thrilling ever witnessed in the Fair Park ring, so fast and furious was the battle.
Pancho, after being seemingly knocked out before realizing whether he was in a wrestling ring or a tornado, rose to great heights to take the first fall from LaCrosse, new king of the meemies.
Here's the way it happened:
After a drab semi-final bout, LaCrosse and Pancho climbed into the ring for the start of the feature event.
At the sound of the gong LaCrosse dashed from his corner like a flash, pouncing upon Pancho before he could face his opponent.
Blooey! bang! bliff! The Mexican sank to the canvass. LaCrosse followed up with body slams, and it looked as if the match was over before it had really started.
Then Pancho gave the crowd its biggest thrill. He rose and with hammer-like precision beat down the Canadian meemie-head.
LaCrosse attempted to gain his feet half a dozen times, but Pancho continued to sock LaCrosse with every bit as savage attack as the Canadian had started.
With the king of the meemies in a daze, Pancho straddled him for the first fall. So crammed with action, the 58 seconds of dash and fire made the crowd pop-eyed. As Pancho left the ring he was given a thunderous applause.
After 25 minutes of wrestling in the second round, LaCrosse forced the Mexican to give up with a punishing back arm lock.
Pancho, as game as any wrestler that ever exchanged holds here, came back into the ring with his limbs helpless. The third round lasted only a few minutes. LaCrosse grabbed the helpless limb and soon forced the Mexican to holler "Pancho," for the third and deciding fall.
The semi-final between Bobby Nelson of Boston and Lon Chaney of Indiana, was a dreary as the feature event was spectacular. Nelson appeared to be a mediocre grappler and was no match for Chaney, who won two straight falls.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance
GOD, THE FORGIVING FATHER
Text: Luke 15:11-24

International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for April 19.
The Parable of the Prodigal Son, someone once remarked, ought to be called the Parable of the Gracious Father. It is the father's unfailing love that the story proclaims.
Youthful wasters in every age have despised the blessings and benefits of home, have turned their backs upon the responsibilities of family life, and have gone out into the world seeking only their own pleasure.
More than one such prodigal has found the way that looked so alluring a path of degradation and death. The full effect of the degradation has been manifest at times in the destruction of all will to restoration. The power to repent and turn back itself has failed.
Here in our parable the prodigal sank to a very low ebb; then not only metaphorically, but literally, he came to himself. He was stripped of everything that he had and of every external thing.
There was some truth in the portrayal of the negro preacher who represented him as selling garment after garment until he had "come to himself," and there was nothing left. Physically and spiritually that was true. He was bare of body and of soul, but fortunately, he was not bereft of the one last vestige of common sense and action.
In the depth of his condition of distress, home seemed a very different sort of place. He pictured the hired servants of his father as possessing something that he had lost, and he determined, though it must have been an abject thing, to go back to the home and the father whom he had spurned, to cast himself upon the father's mercy and to ask only that he might have the place of a servant.
More than one prodigal has thus returned, sometimes failing to find a very warm reception. There have been fathers who have been stern and unyielding to the returning wanderers; so that the outstanding thing about this story is the picture of the father, thoughtful, merciful, magnanimous, with the rich and gracious love that is above all harshness and mere justice, who deals with this repentant son in terms of what may be tomorrow, and not in terms of the failure and tragedy of yesterday.
It is the love of this earthly father that is the prototype of the love of God. It was the essence of the teaching of the Gospel of Jesus that all that was best in earthly life only bore witness to the richness and fullness of something larger in the Father, who is the source of all life, and light, and love, and goodness.
The whole nature of the world today might be symbolized in the condition of this prodigal. It is a world that has turned to schemes of greed and truth and love and kindness, that has turned to schemes of greed and war and hate, a world that has spurned alike the will of God and the abundance of God, and that lies today bleeding in its wounds and in its poverty.
But over this world there broods the love and grace of the Divine Father. Would that as individuals and as a world we might return to the Father's house and find a place of restoration and newness of life!

Orchard as Vital as Family Garden

It's Garden's Running-Mate in Furnishing Vitamins, Minerals

The answer to the year-round question of three meals a day isn't to be found entirely in a vegetable garden. Miss Helen Griffin, home demonstration agent, is reminding Hempstead county women who are now planning their year's food supply.
A home orchard is the running-mate of the garden in supplying the family with plenty of vitamins and minerals. Apples, peaches, pears, small fruits such as strawberries, youngberries, or blackberries, and watermelons and cantaloupes to furnish fresh fruit during the season, have earned an important place in the food supply plans for Hempstead county families.
The best kind of a sweet for growing children is sorghum, which is rich in the lime and iron which are so useful for building bones, teeth, and red blood cells, according to Miss Gertrude E. Conant, Extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Another valuable sweet is honey, which has a medicinal as well as food value.
Peanuts are bread, meat, and potatoes so far as food value goes, and they deserve a place in the food supply plans.
Extension circular 307 gives suggestions for planning the food supply, and may be obtained at the home demonstration agent's office, Miss Griffin states.

Editor of Advance
GOD, THE FORGIVING FATHER
Text: Luke 15:11-24

International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for April 19.
The Parable of the Prodigal Son, someone once remarked, ought to be called the Parable of the Gracious Father. It is the father's unfailing love that the story proclaims.
Youthful wasters in every age have despised the blessings and benefits of home, have turned their backs upon the responsibilities of family life, and have gone out into the world seeking only their own pleasure.
More than one such prodigal has found the way that looked so alluring a path of degradation and death. The full effect of the degradation has been manifest at times in the destruction of all will to restoration. The power to repent and turn back itself has failed.
Here in our parable the prodigal sank to a very low ebb; then not only metaphorically, but literally, he came to himself. He was stripped of everything that he had and of every external thing.
There was some truth in the portrayal of the negro preacher who represented him as selling garment after garment until he had "come to himself," and there was nothing left. Physically and spiritually that was true. He was bare of body and of soul, but fortunately, he was not bereft of the one last vestige of common sense and action.
In the depth of his condition of distress, home seemed a very different sort of place. He pictured the hired servants of his father as possessing something that he had lost, and he determined, though it must have been an abject thing, to go back to the home and the father whom he had spurned, to cast himself upon the father's mercy and to ask only that he might have the place of a servant.
More than one prodigal has thus returned, sometimes failing to find a very warm reception. There have been fathers who have been stern and unyielding to the returning wanderers; so that the outstanding thing about this story is the picture of the father, thoughtful, merciful, magnanimous, with the rich and gracious love that is above all harshness and mere justice, who deals with this repentant son in terms of what may be tomorrow, and not in terms of the failure and tragedy of yesterday.
It is the love of this earthly father that is the prototype of the love of God. It was the essence of the teaching of the Gospel of Jesus that all that was best in earthly life only bore witness to the richness and fullness of something larger in the Father, who is the source of all life, and light, and love, and goodness.
The whole nature of the world today might be symbolized in the condition of this prodigal. It is a world that has turned to schemes of greed and truth and love and kindness, that has turned to schemes of greed and war and hate, a world that has spurned alike the will of God and the abundance of God, and that lies today bleeding in its wounds and in its poverty.
But over this world there broods the love and grace of the Divine Father. Would that as individuals and as a world we might return to the Father's house and find a place of restoration and newness of life!

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That in pursuance of the authority and directions contained in the decretal order of the Chancery Court of Hempstead County, made and entered on the 14th day of April, 1936, in a certain cause then pending therein between J. H. White et al, complainants, and Jesse C. Collins et al, defendants, the undersigned, as Commissioner of said Court, will offer for sale at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the front door or entrance to the Citizens National Bank, in the City of Hope, in Hempstead County, Arkansas, within the hours prescribed by law for judicial sales, on the 23rd day of May, 1936, the following described real estate, situated in Hempstead County, Arkansas, to-wit:

All that part of the Northeast

Quarter (NE 1/4) of Section Thirty-five (35), Township Thirteen (13) South, Range Twenty-five (25) West, in Hempstead county, Arkansas, lying and being situated north and west of the Hope and Dooley's Ferry Public Road, except three acres in the northeast corner thereof owned by Roy Collins at the time of his death, and described as follows, to-wit: Begin at the northeast corner of said Section 35 and run thence west 400 feet, run thence south about 400 feet to a stake in the center of said Hope and Dooley's Ferry Public Road, run thence northeast along the center of said road back to the point of beginning, and also except about half an acre in the southwest corner thereof described as follows, to-wit: Begin at the center of said Section 35 and run thence north 209 feet, run thence east 209 feet to a stake in the center of said road, run thence southwest back to the point of beginning—the land herein described containing 76 1/2 acres, more or less.

TERMS OF SALE: On a credit of three months, the purchaser being required to execute a bond as required by law and the order and decree of said court in said cause, with approved security, bearing interest at the rate of 10% per annum from date of sale until paid, and a lien being retained on the premises sold to secure the payment of the purchase money.

GIVEN under my hand this 15th day of April, 1936.

DALE JONES
Commissioner in Chancery

The copyright law was conceived in the Kingdom of Tara, part of Ireland. A monk designed a psalter, which was copied by a rival monastery. On hearing the case, the king announced, "To every cow her calf," and ordered the infringing copy destroyed.

Scotland had more marriages in 1934 than in any other year since 1921.

Bartholomew Lad Center of Drama

Aunt Made Him Film Star—Now His Mother Wants Him Back

By ROBBIN COONS
Associated Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—The screen son of Greta Garbo, Dolores Costello Barrymore and Elizabeth Allan went through a series of dramatic moments in his short life to reach this point.

Now 12-year-old Freddie Bartholomew has become the center of a real-life dramatic situation that has all Hollywood interested.

On one side in the controversy is Freddie's aunt, Miss Mylicent Barrymore, who has had charge of his education and training for the past nine years, and who recently had herself appointed his legal guardian in the California courts.

On the other side are Freddie's parents. His mother, Mrs. Lillian Mae Bartholomew, has come from London to contest her sister-in-law's custody of the child "wonder actor" whose film earnings are more than $1,250 a week. His father, Mrs. Bartholomew explained, remained in England because of illness.

Two Versions
When Freddie and his aunt arrived in Hollywood more than two years ago in answer to the movies' need for a "David Copperfield," Miss Mylicent Bartholomew explained they were present—with his parents' permission—on a vacation. That he could be "Copperfield" was "in the back of their minds," of course, she said. Freddie's mother says that when they left, his aunt already had the contract. Freddie, a precocious youngster who intends to write "contemplative novels" when he grows up, and meanwhile belies his almost fragile appearance by indulging in the roughest sports permitted, became of starring caliber after "David Copperfield," played Garbo's son in "Anna Karenina," did "Professional Soldier" with Victor McLaglen and most recently was "Little Lord Fauntleroy" to Dolores Costello's "Dearest."

Mother Arrives
Somewhere along the way his salary was jumped from $100 a week to $1,500. Last October, Miss Mylicent went into court in Los Angeles and was granted sole legal custody of the boy, with his parents granted a limited period of appeal. His mother arrived in New York before that period expired.

In Hollywood the lad always has been valuable in his affection for his aunt, who started him on nursery rhymes and had him reciting Shakespeare and liking it—before he was six.

So the stage is set (barring that amicable settlement the attorneys talk about) for one of the town's most heart-rending off-screen dramas.

Army Flood Control Plan Forges Chains on Mississippi

WASHINGTON — When they gave Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown the job of seeing that the disastrous lower Mississippi floods of 1927 were not repeated, he said:

"The law allows us 10 years to put the Mississippi under control. We don't need 10 years. The job will be done sooner."

Ten years from 1928, when the star was made to put the Jadwin plan for river control in effect, would be 1938. And today, spring of 1936, it looks as though General Brown's statement was no idle boast. The army engineers aren't given to idle boasts.

Though night and day patrols stalk anxiously along the levee below Cairo, and although some bottom-lands have already been flooded, it seems certain that large-scale flood disasters will be avoided.

It has cost $272,000,000 thus far to achieve this. Before the Jadwin plan is entirely complete, $325,000,000 will have been spent.

But the money loss of the 1927 floods alone mounted up to $270,000,000, not to speak of hundreds of lives lost. If the lower Mississippi protection system is as effective as it now appears to be, it will be money well spent.

But the money loss of the 1927 floods alone mounted up to $270,000,000, not to speak of hundreds of lives lost. If the lower Mississippi protection system is as effective as it now appears to be, it will be money well spent.

Tremendous Task
Tinkering with the Mississippi has been going on for 50 years. But it was only in 1927 when great breaches were smashed in the existing levees and 20,000 square miles of territory were flooded, that a really big plan was adopted. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers, designed the plan, and General Brown has been in charge of most of the work, now 80 per cent complete.

The job is so tremendous that few realize what it means. For one thing, twice as much dirt was moved as was scooped out for the Panama Canal. The present levee system, about 1,000 miles long, all constructed to uniform standards of strength, is longer than the Great Wall of China and in some places it is 25 times as thick.

Floodways Help
In addition to the levees, 12 "bends" in the river have been straightened out. That allows the water to run through more swiftly, and tends to prevent it from "flattening out" over the country.

In several places floodways have been built. These are supplementary channels or basins into which the river water can be diverted whenever the pressure gets so great that it seems likely to break the levee. This involves some flooding, but the areas are chosen from among those which are swampy anyway, or which have few farmers living on them.

New Orleans is believed to be at last absolutely safe from flood. The completion of the magnificent Bonnet Carré spillway makes it possible to divert the Mississippi waters into Lake Pontchartrain if the flood crest gets too high for the levee. The Atchafalaya cutoff west of New Orleans has also been completed.

This deepening of channels into which the Mississippi overflowed at flood should also carry off high water, and between the two, New Orleans breathes easily for the first time. There will be no repetition of 1927, when the levee below the city was deliberately blown open, flooding broad areas, to relieve pressure upstream and save the city.

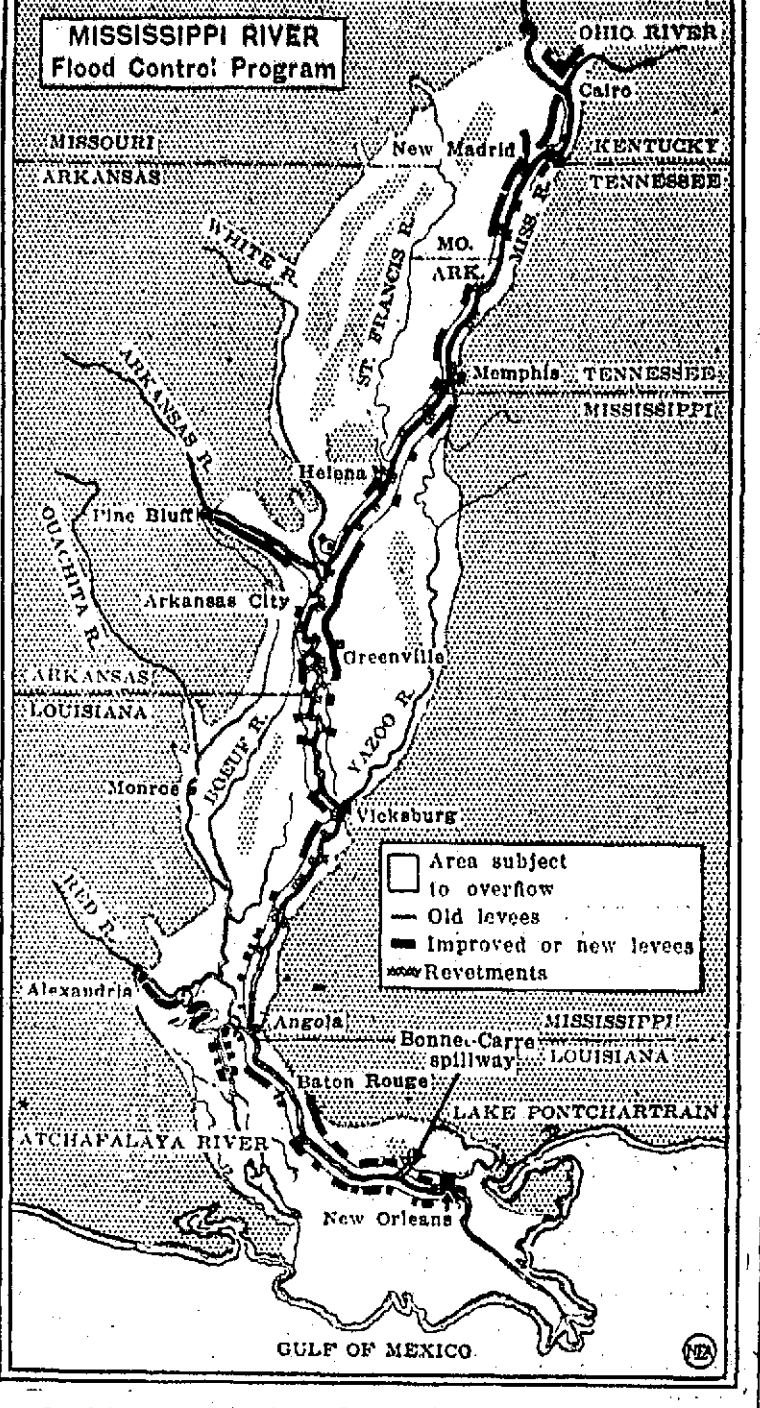

New Madrid, Mo., which was completely submerged in the disaster of 1927, is safe today, engineers agree. The floodway, or parallel emergency channels which can be opened in case of danger, are ready, extending from Bird's Point to New Madrid. And the "back levees," or second line of defense, are also ready.

Crests No Menace
Though the Jadwin plan is not complete, the levees, emergency channels, and other works which run from Rock Island, Ill., down past Cairo, Memphis, and on to the Gulf of Mexico, are near enough to completion to give protection this spring. Flood crests from the Ohio, entering the great river at Cairo, have not endangered the works.

Except for small areas in little-settled places, it is believed that the Father of Waters is safe in all of the 1600 miles he takes to travel the 600 miles a crow flies from Cairo to New Orleans.

The appropriation for the present year was $15,000,000, about half of which is being spent on maintaining the navigable channel, and half for finishing up small levees around New Orleans and cave-ins along the bank. Revetments—or "blankets" of concrete, wire or willow matting—have been laid at many points to protect the levee bottoms from river scour.

As a result of all this labor, the Involving a greater volume of excavation than the Panama Canal, the lower Mississippi flood prevention plan is now 80 per cent complete. It is regarded as having made this area safe from flood crests that did great damage along the upper rivers.

Pension Merger Leaves Him Cold

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—(P)—Matrimony holds no interest for Jesse R. Farmer, 76, widower, who received the first state old age pension check.

A letter from a widow suggested that "we put our pension checks together and we ought to get along fine." A stamped envelope was included.

"Why should I?" Farmer answered. "I don't need a woman around at this stage of life. No sir, I'm content to let well enough alone."

He receives $10 a month.

Much Is Expected of Air Hostesses

Air Lines' Requirements Are Severe—Waiting List Tremendous

By CLYDE A. FARNWORTH
Associated Press Correspondent
NEW YORK —(P)—Requirements are strict, yet thousands of young women are seeking the comparatively few hostess jobs available on passenger ships of the nation's air lines.

Six years ago the first major transport line announced it was adding women to its regular crews. Since then the beauty, charm and bravery of the hostesses who cruise the nation's skies have become traditional—and applications from young women have crammed the files of the major companies. One line has 2,000 applications, but insists there is a shortage of qualified women.

Generally stated, the air-minded young women must fill these requirements if she would don the pert uniform of the stewardess.

She must be a graduate registered nurse.

Her height must not be more than five feet, four; nor may she weigh more than 120 pounds.

She must not be more than 26 years old.

She must have an engaging personality, be solicitous of the comfort of others and capable of performing a variety of tasks, from explaining the fundamentals of aerial navigation to helping change a diaper.

They Go to School
One of the air lines operates a school to polish its stewardesses, classes going into such things as passenger psychology, how to make air travelers comfortable, serving lunches and answering questions about the geography of the routes flown.

The stewardesses must be a registered nurse, explains an air line representative, "because the institutionally trained girl has an understanding of discipline and a knowledge of how to deal with the public that is required in the job of stewardess."

The stewardess may not be "beautiful but dumb."

Conversationalists Favored
She must have sense enough to be able to carry her end of almost any conversation. She must have poise in the presence of the great and near great, for many in these classifications travel by air—politicians and movie stars, opera singers and captains of industry.

The ranks of these aerial Jacqueline-of-all-trades are constantly being depleted by that quick bank-burn which lands women in front of altars. Says an air line official:

"A majority of the stewardesses who have given up their work to become housewives have married pilots, while several others have married passengers."

Illinois police officers, under the new traffic code of the state bureau of vehicles, may now warn slow drivers against delaying traffic.

Married Women Know Constipation's Danger

After childbirth, women often suffer with constipation. That is why From-a-Mint, the delightful chewing gum laxative is so useful. As soon as you start chewing it, the stomach-stimulating mint brings a clean, fresh taste to the mouth. As you chew out the laxative ingredient, which is absolutely tasteless, the flow of digestive juices is increased. The laxative is mixed with those carried into the system evenly and gently. Without causing upset, it passes through the stomach and into the bowels so scientifically that your action is wonderfully easy and thorough. Doctors prescribe From-a-Mint's laxative ingredient for both children and adults. It is non-habit-forming. Sold on money-back guarantee. Generous family size package 16c and 25c.
